Polls for Primary Will Open at 7 O'Clock This Morning and Heavy Vote Is Now Expected.

21,330 ATLANTANS QUALIFIED TO VOTE

Chief Interest Continues To Center in Contest for Post of Chief of Construction.

BY HERMAN HANCOCK. With all candidates for contested posts expressing confidence of success, and with the final plans for votes at public meetings made, the city primary campaign ended Tuesday night and voters of Atlanta will march to the polls today to render their decision.

There are 21,330 Atlantans qualified to cast their ballots and despite forecasts from Washington of thunderstorms today political experts predicted that a heavy vote would be polled. At least 16,000 votes are expected.

Polls will open this morning at 7 o'clock and will remain open until 7 o'clock tonight. Although 33 offices are to be filled, there are only 12 contests, chief interest being centered in the race for chief of construction between W. A. Hansell, the incumbent, and Clarke Donaldson, his former first assistant. In all there are 49 candidates for office.

Three Rallies Held. The close of the campaign came Tuesday night when three rallies were held, in which all candidates for city-wide offices participated. They were held at Crew Street school, Marietta and Ashby streets, and at Chestnut and Kennedy streets.

Contest for the post of chief of construction continued to occupy the political spotlight Tuesday night. Mr. Hansell related the accomplishments of his department during the past five years, pointing to viaduct, sidewalk, curb and street projects.

Mr. Donaldson continued his attack on what he termed the "mistakes of the present administration" and called on the voters to seek a change. Both speakers were given ovations by the large audience at the Crew Street school, staged under the sponsorship of Mr. Donaldson's friends.

The Marietta street rally was staged under auspices of friends of Tom Morris, seeking the councilmanic post from the fifth ward, which is now held by James E. Bowden, and the Chestnut meeting was sponsored by friends of Mr. Bowden. Large crowds were present at each rally.

Official ballots show a contest for the post of alderman from the seventh ward, but J. P. Wall, chairman

SMALL DEPARTS FOR G. O. P. MEET EXPECTING QUIET

G. O. P. Needs Harmony Too Much to Indulge in Convention Scrap, Says Political Expert.

BY SAM W. SMALL, Special Staff Correspondent.

Washington, June 5.—(Special.)—With railway ticket and berth check in pouch I am off with the other loose elements of the nation to witness a report upon the republican wild west show now assembling at Kansas City for next week's performances.

The pre-convention prophecies run both ways from the go-ahead gang. One set promises the most heated and harum-scarum republican rodeo since Roosevelt's rough riders rode out of the Chicago convention of 1912.

Wild Convention. The other prophecies say, well, they omit such suggestive words as "oil" or "greased"—that the convention machinery has been so carefully "pre-adjusted" that the convention will likely be even less exciting than the Methodist general conference that occupied the hall all through May.

It is my guess that the latter prediction is most probably the correct one. The national political situation makes it dangerous for the republicans to stage a furious internecine war in their convention. They need "harmony" more than do the democrats. They are going to fight this year's nation-wide battle on the defensive and will need to figure closely the party secretaries and those they can afford to sacrifice.

Battle Fields Chosen. What was reported in these dispatches weeks ago is now coming quite clearly into open recognition. That is, the chief battlegrounds of the party have been determined to make their main fight east of the Mississippi river.

They figure that the party can lose no electoral votes west of the Rocky mountains, unless Arizona and New Mexico fail to register for it. Between them they have only six electoral votes.

The vital menace to the republicans is the possible loss of states in the east and midwest that are essential to them if they are to win the presidency again. Frankly, they do not expect, and so do not intend to take any risk of doing so that strategy, hard work and money can avoid. As for the granger states in the west they are willing to battle the democrats for them, who will do their best.

Hoover Sitting Pretty. Up to this hour Secretary Hoover is sitting pretty on a four-mile race far out in front. The latest list of "cinch" delegates exhibits 480 who will start with him and stick until he is in or down and out. In that list neither the New York nor Pennsylvania delegations are registered.

Secretary Andy Mellon, without question, controls the 73 votes from Pennsylvania. The common understanding is that he will throw them promptly to Hoover, giving him a clear

COYKENDALL ASKS FOR DEPORTATION OF BRITISH CITIZEN

Recommendation that papers for deportation of Francis Matthews, native of England, be issued by the secretary of labor will be made by M. A. Coykendall, district director of immigration, following a hearing Tuesday morning to investigate charges that Matthews, manager of the Crystal Carbon Laboratory, a subsidiary of the Coca-Cola company, had overstayed his alien visitor's permit. Mr. Coykendall announced.

Matthews was formerly in the foreign service of the Coca-Cola company in Cuba, and after coming to Atlanta took over new duties as a department manager for the company, immigration officers said. Matthews' permit was good for only three months and he has been here for approximately a year, it was said.

FLIERS AWAIT NEW RUNWAY FOR LAST JUMP

Southern Cross Quartet Will Not Break Up Until Plane Lands at Sydney, Australia.

SUVA FETES FOUR ON PACIFIC FLIGHT

Takeoff Impossible on Present Field; Longer Level Land Is Sought To Permit Getaway.

BY SIR MAYNARD HEDSTROM, United News Special Correspondent.

Suva, Fiji Islands, June 6.—(Wednesday.)—(United News.)—The four members of the crew of the monoplane Southern Cross remain united until they reach Australia at the end of their 7,350-mile flight over the Pacific ocean from California, Captain Charles Kingsford-Smith, pilot, announced this afternoon.

"We are anxious to resume our journey at the earliest possible time," the Australian war ace said, "but we must first find a suitable runway for the take-off."

"Captain Harry Lyon and James Warner will continue to Australia with us."

Planned To Separate.

Lyon, navigator of the monoplane, and Warner, the radio operator, had originally planned to stay here. They are Americans, while Captain Kingsford-Smith and Charles T. P. Ulm, co-pilot, are Australians.

It was disclosed also that sufficient gasoline for only another 100 miles of flying remained in the tanks of the plane when it completed the 3,135-mile flight from the Hawaiian islands Tuesday.

The cricket field is too short for a take-off, and the pilot said. He had hardly been able to bring the

APPEAL PLANNED BY HIGHWAY BODY

Effort Will Be Made To Have Supreme Court Set Aside State Aid Case Decision.

The state highway department will appeal to the supreme court a decision rendered Monday by Judge R. N. Hardeman, of the Jefferson circuit court, enjoining the department from finishing a stretch of road on a state aid project in Richmond and Burke counties on the ground that the department has exceeded its 6,300 total allotment of such mileage, it was announced Tuesday by Seward M. Smith, attorney for the state highway board.

The case involves the mooted question of whether or not roads built by the department through towns of less than 2,500 population should be included in the total mileage of 6,300 miles. The highway board contends that the 6,300 miles does not include roads built through such city limits according to Mr. Smith.

In the case decided by Judge Hardeman, citizens of Richmond and Burke counties, headed by W. B. Marks obtained an injunction specifically to restrain the department from completing the road known as the "Mile Stretch," and substituting this route for the McBean highway route, between Augusta and Waynesboro. While this is a local question applying to Richmond and Burke counties, the question of how many miles have been allotted by the state highway board in state aid projects is one that has developed in litigation coming up in other parts of the state. "We intend to carry this question

HEIFER WAS MAD; FEAR FOR SAFETY OF TWO HANDLERS

Dalton, Ga., June 5.—(Special.)—Two men, Winston Parsons and Hiram Southern, residing about half a mile from here, are taking the Pasteur treatment to prevent rabies, following the discovery that a heifer, owned by Parsons, was affected with hydrophobia. The two men had handled the heifer and received some minor wounds on the hands.

The heifer was purchased a month or so ago in the county, previous owner, it was stated, had two dogs which went mad last August and another a few months later. It is surmised that one of the dogs had bitten the heifer. The heifer, after it had refused food or drink for several days, was killed and the head shipped to the laboratories of the state board of health at Atlanta, where it would be to be affected with hydrophobia.

$100,000 Mail Thief's Career Halted by Three-Year Term

HENRY B. DAVIS.

The "high, wide and handsome" career of Henry B. Davis, erstwhile mail thief and army deserter, was brought to a three-year halt Tuesday morning, when Judge Samuel H. Sibley, in United States district court, sentenced Davis to the Atlanta Penitentiary on a charge of larceny of mail. Davis is the hold youth whose clever fingers lifted $100,000 in cashiers' checks from the bank consigned to the federal reserve bank here, and who subsequently made a daring and successful dash for liberty through crowded streets after breaking away from deputy United States marshals.

In explaining things to Judge Sibley Tuesday morning, Davis said that he made his break for liberty because a girl friend of his was lying dangerously ill, and in fact, died the next night with him at her bedside. Judge Sibley said that he hated to see such a young man throwing himself away, and that he thought Davis could make good if he tried.

Identified in Leavenworth. Davis was recaptured for the Atlanta offense when he was identified at Fort Leavenworth as the fugitive from this city. He was serving a term in Leavenworth for army desertion, and following his identification as the man who escaped from Deputy Marshals Haney and Ledford here, was held for the local federal authorities as a deserter from the army.

With Davis once more behind the bars, and headed for the penitentiary Tuesday, Deputy Marshal Haney heaved a sigh of relief and satisfaction, while Inspector Fleming, happy at the close of one of his hardest cases, said he would take a much needed vacation.

When the messenger from the Atlanta Federal Reserve bank made his daily trip to the bank's postoffice locked box one day in 1926, he failed to pay any attention to a young man who hovered near, and whose quick fingers lifted a number of valuable letters from the bank's mail when the messenger's back was turned, according to postoffice inspectors. Davis attempted to cash one of the checks at a local bank, but there was a stop-order on the check, and so Davis was held until investigators rushed to the bank and made the arrest.

Escaped After Chase. At a commissioner's hearing, Davis was held under $20,000 bond, and was lodged in Fulton tower. Following grand jury indictment, he was being brought to the courtroom by Deputy Marshals Haney and Ledford in company with several other prisoners, all of whom were to plead guilty. At Forsyth and Marietta streets, Davis leaped from the automobile, and escaped after a mad chase through dense crowds. Nothing more was heard of him until his identification at Leavenworth.

Abandonment of the plan to consolidate Boys' and Tech High schools and their operation as separate and distinct institutions probably on different campuses is slated if its regular board of education at its regular June meeting next week accepts a report of a special committee which was formulated and approved Tuesday afternoon at a meeting at city hall.

Probability that the school board will recommend that a fund of $1,000,000 for carrying out plans of the committee be included in a tentative bond issue now being prepared also loomed when suggestions were made that suitable buildings be provided for the Boys' High on the present or some other adequate campus.

Action of the committee, which is headed by School Commissioner John T. Hancock, of the eighth ward, was based on recommendations of the administration department of the school system.

Merger Economy Move. About a year ago the school board voted to consolidate the institutions as an economy move, and this action will be abrogated and the institutions will sever their joint relationship if the board accepts recommendation of the committee.

Dr. R. M. Eubanks, school commissioner from the fourth ward, voted against adoption of the administration department's recommendations, holding that the schools should be merged. Representatives of the P. E. A.'s and administration officials of the institution attended the meeting of the committee.

In addition to adopting recommendation of the school administration department.

HOOVER FORCES HOLD THE WHIP IN KANSAS CITY

Secretary Gains 22 More Contested Votes as Committee Beats Cohen, New Orleans Negro.

BUTLER OPROSES HOOVER MOVES

President's Friend Votes Only Once on Side of Secretary; Texas and Georgia Up Today.

Kansas City, June 5.—(AP)—Another run of victories for Herbert Hoover in contests decided today by the republican national committee increased his string of sure delegates in next week's convention by 22, twice the total bagged for him at yesterday's hearings.

With his supporters on the committee holding a whip hand, the commerce secretary at today's sessions picked up ten votes in Louisiana and 12 in Mississippi, but failed to make a clean sweep as on yesterday. Two district delegates from Louisiana, not on the Hoover slate, gained seats in the face of contests, and the indications are that they will support some other candidate on the first ballots.

While all of the delegates he garnered yesterday and today had been placed in the Hoover column weeks ago by his managers in their claims of his strength, his opponents, because of contests, had refused to concede to him.

Butler Votes Against Cohen. After Emilio Kuntz, national committee member from Louisiana, Hoover man, had gotten the best of it today in the showdown with his political opponent, Walter L. Cohen, negro controller of customs at New Orleans, Perry W. Howard, negro national committeeman from Mississippi, voted against Cohen.

CITIES IN GEORGIA SUFFER SEVERELY IN WIND STORMS

Buildings Unroofed at Milledgeville; Americus Also Hit; Floods Threaten Southeast States.

Terrific windstorms, accompanied by heavy rains, wreaked havoc in various sections of Georgia Tuesday. Reports from Milledgeville told of buildings unroofed at the state sanatorium by a wind of tornado-like proportions which also uprooted more than 150 large trees in that city. One man was injured at this place.

Americus likewise reported a wind of terrific fury, accompanied by a brief deluge. Here, as in Milledgeville, the principal damage was caused by uprooted trees.

In a number of southeastern states the past 48 hours have seen swells of small rivers and creeks until they have left their banks and residents of the lowlands are reported seeking safety on higher ground. Flood conditions are reported in Louisiana, Mississippi and southern Alabama.

The air mail pilot flying between New Orleans and Atlanta, who arrived here last night, reported many fields flooded and streets out of their banks all along his route.

TORNADO WIND AT MILLEDGEVILLE.

A terrific wind storm that assumed the proportions of a tornado swept over the state sanatorium here this afternoon and left in its wake over 150 uprooted trees, several buildings of the state institutions unroofed, one man injured. The damage to the state property is estimated at $25,000. The storm, which was of 30 minutes duration, was confined within the area occupied by the state institution.

William Gillman, an employee at the institution, was hurled to the ground while seeking shelter when the storm broke and he slipped on a broken arm. Gillman is the only casualty reported by the sanitarian authorities.

Trees were uprooted and hurled a distance of over 100 feet by the high winds which are said to have gained a velocity of over 80 miles an hour. A towering oak in the center of a grove in front of the main building was toppled and crashed through one of the wards of the institution which was then unoccupied. The patients were in the assembly room attending a social gathering.

Another oak tree in the rear of the main building was uprooted and it crashed through the heavy stone wall into one of the wards which was also unoccupied at the time.

The roof on a building which houses between 400 and 500 white female patients was torn loose and hurled a distance of over 100 yards. Likewise the buildings occupied by several hundred negro patients was unroofed.

CHINESE VICTORS TAKE OVER PEKIN

Southern Armies March Into Capital To End Five Years of Civil Warfare in Country.

BY D. C. BESS, United News Staff Correspondent.

Pekin, June 5.—(United News.)—The vanguard of the victorious nationalist troops entered Peking unopposed at 10 a. m. today on the heels of the defeated armies of Marshal Chang Tso-Lin, northern war lord, who fled to Mukden.

General Hsu Yung Chang, commander of the Shansi army, was the first southerner to enter the northern capital, capture of which virtually ended the five years of civil warfare in China.

The fall of Peking, for 900 years the capital of China, with the exception of brief revolutionary periods, marked the definite defeat of Chang Tso-Lin's hope to extend his influence over a sufficient zone to warrant his recognition by the great powers, which he had sought for years.

Soviets Declare Messages Officially Establish Explorer's Whereabouts as Franz Josef Land.

RESCUE PLANES TO SEARCH TODAY

Radio Calls, Thought Hoax, Prove To Be Coming Direct From Italia, Is Now Belief.

Moscow, June 5.—(United News.) The government radio station at Obdorsk, north Siberia, received a message from General Umberto Nobile, commander of the polar dirigible Italia, saying he had landed on Franz Josef Land and needed help, it was officially said here tonight.

Nobile's message said: "Dirigible Italia grounded Franz Josef Land S O S."

Soviet officials and members of the Italian embassy were convinced to night that Nobile would be found on Franz Josef Land.

The government announced a rescue expedition with airplanes would start Wednesday for Franz Josef Land to search for Nobile. An icebreaker was ordered to proceed immediately to the rescue, approaching as near to Franz Josef Land as ice would permit.

First announcement that Nobile's message had been heard came from a trawler at Murmansk which picked up the Obdorsk report. The government tonight confirmed receipt of this message.

Since Nobile sent his message from the storm-torn Italia 11 days ago, saying his engines were crippled and he had been forced to turn and flee before the gale, nothing definite had been heard from him, but for several days rumors were about that amateurs had picked up messages from the Italia.

Experts here and elsewhere now believe these messages were legitimate. The Norwegian radio expert, Capt. Gottwald, who crossed the north pole in the Norge, had advised Nobile, it was recalled, to use a 25-25 miles wave and hence the messages interpreted in Scandinavia and Siberia, sent on short wave, could have originated from Nobile.

Verification of the receipt of the SOS by the government radio station at Obdorsk turned all rescue expeditions toward the barren Franz Josef Land, which is believed to be official circles that Nobile would be found there.

Ice boats at Murmansk and Archangel were ordered to take on provisions for the earliest possible departure for Franz Josef Land.

A few officers of the northern army had remained to maintain order and turn the city over officially to the nationalists.

Northerners Desert.

The first indication that there may be sharp conflict for power among the victors came in a dispatch from Tientsin which said that as a result of the negotiations some northern generals had turned over 50,000 northern troops under General Yi Lung-chung and Marshal Sun Chuan-fang to the Chinese government.

A few officers of the northern army had remained to maintain order and turn the city over officially to the nationalists.

Diplomatic quarters tonight were awaiting with some uneasiness the next move of the nationalists, but at this time there appeared no cause for fear that any interference would be made with activities of the foreign settlement.

The legation quarter, between the imperial city and the Chinese city, surrounded by the Tartar and Chinese sections, is little city itself, and protected as it is by a high wall, could easily be defended for an indefinite time.

majority, probably on the first ballot, and thereby sewing up the presidential candidacy, leaving no chance for shifting and trading of farm-reliever or favorite son votes.

To settle the case for Hoover right out of hand is deemed the wiser and safer course for the supporters of the administration.

Details for Hoover.

Another evidence of the Hoover trend is the composition of the national committee. It is strongly pro-Hoover and has started in to settling the contests for seats in the convention by decisions in the Florida cases that warrant the belief that many contesting Hooverites will be seated. That will strengthen him very sensibly and weaken the allies against him.

Also, the seat plan of the convention hall was evidently arranged by Hoover henchmen. California and Pennsylvania are given jam-up front positions, with Uncle Andy Mellon on the right-hand corner of his big delegation and under the nose of the presiding officer where he cannot be overlooked, unless the chairman wears a blindfold. The Hoover delegations are skillfully massed in front and the anti-Hoover delegations are mostly located in the way back seats. It is a mighty fine arrangement for the pulling off of Hoover parades and a band wagon rush!

Allies Are Not Agreed.

It is now coming to the surface that the anti-Hoover allies are not fully agreed upon their preference and program. Not all of the farmers are members of the anti-Hoover "battalion of death." Some of the most representative men among them are coming out openly for the secretary's nomination.

It is going to be an adept chess-player's job to set all those who do not want Hoover in battle-array for some one man whom they all will accept and fight for.

And if Governor Lowden refuses to consider standing upon a Coolidge-applauding platform, implying praise for his veto of the McNary-Haugen bill, which other of the farm-reliever candidates can afford to do it?

It is a hard choice the grangers will have to make—either to repudiate President Coolidge, or abandon their pet plan of obtaining their sort of farm relief.

Priming Platform.

The able administration politicians are naturally interested in the contents of the platform the convention will be asked to adopt. The preliminary draft of it is being concocted by the master-brain of that adroit have withheld recognition during the turbulent years of internecine strife.

Three southern armies, by the capture of Peking, have won control over a region greater than that ruled by any Chinese war lord or statesman for a decade; but it was doubtful tonight whether the leaders of the three nationalist armies could agree upon administration of the city and establishment of a central government.

Jealousy exists among them and it was believed here it would be difficult to consolidate the hard-won peace.

General Feng Yu-Hsiang has been promised rulership of the city, the southern army to retain their central capital at Nanking, which the nationalists believe will tend to eliminate foreign influence, so apparent at Peking and Shanghai. Nanking also is more central.

Entry Is Peaceful.

No untoward incidents marked the entry of the victorious nationalist soldiers into the "imperial city," always the richest prize to be won from civil war in China. The first squads of nationalist soldiers swung in the suburbs in a manner almost casual. They already had occupied the old imperial summer palace, 10 miles outside the city.

Foreign soldiers and marines stood guard about the walled compound of the legations, and native police and special guards maintained order in the Chinese city.

The sun-banner of the nationalists was hoisted over the houses of the first of the victorious troops entered, but there was no great demonstration. A few officers of the northern army had remained to maintain order and turn the city over officially to the nationalists.

The first indication that there may be sharp conflict for power among the victors came in a dispatch from Tientsin which said that as a result of the negotiations some northern generals had turned over 50,000 northern troops under General Yi Lung-chung and Marshal Sun Chuan-fang to the Chinese government.

politician, Senator Reed Smoot.

He is receiving counsel from the president and from the most astute leaders of the party in all critical states. He is reported to be primping the document so that it will be round and smooth as a billiard ball, able to roll equally easy in any direction.

The platform will be pungent for the "faithful enforcement of the constitution and the laws," and will pledge to the farmers equal protection with other branches of industry and labor, with the fullest measures of specific aid the constitution will allow. "Take it or leave it!"

Second Place.

The guessing as to their vice presidential nomination is yet wholly desultory and generally based upon the probable nomination of Hoover for president.

Some guess it will go to Senator Curtis with a view to mollifying the farmer insurgents, but it is doubtful that Curtis would accept it. Curtis voted for the McNary-Haugen bill, but reneged by voting to sustain Coolidge's veto of it.

Besides, the farmers have had Davis in the vice presidential chair, and still have him there, and what has that gotten them?

Others guess that some man in the middle should be named with Hoover, but no man in that region stands out as one capable of boosting the ticket much.

to the supreme court," Mr. Smith said Tuesday after Chairman John N. Holder, of the state highway board, had referred inquiries to the attorney as to the course to be followed.

"The highway board always has contended that roads built through incorporated towns of 2,500 population or less do not come under the state highway act. The petitioners for the injunction contend that such roads do come under the act and that the highway department, through such inclusion, has exceeded its total capacity of 6,300 miles in allotments. It also is contended that the department, for this reason, has no right to build the new "Seven Mile Stretch" and also that the department has no authority to abandon the old route known as the Mellean route in order to build the road on the new route. Mr. Smith said he had nothing more to say about the case as he has not received a transcript of Judge Handelman's opinion.

"That the Boys' High school and Tech High school in the future be operated, beginning September 1, as separate and distinct institutions."

"That as soon as possible separate and distinct buildings, on the present or on some other adequate campus, be provided for Boys' High, but that until this can be done the two schools be operated in the building which now house the two schools."

"That until such time as separate buildings can be erected, additional space be provided in the form of portables to care for the increased enrollment in the two schools."

"That until the schools are separated in different plants, the present policy of permitting students in one school to elect courses in the other school, be continued."

"That separate military quarters be provided for each school during the summer by moving two 4-room portables on the grounds."

Baptist Woman's Missionary Union in Annual Session

Forsyth, Ga., June 5.—(Special).—Baptist women from all sections of the state gathered in the auditorium of the Forsyth college today for the opening session of the forty-sixth annual convention of the Woman's Missionary Union of Georgia.

For the 16th successive year the assembly is being presided over by Mrs. W. J. Neel, of Cartersville, president, an outstanding figure among Baptist women of the south.

The keynote of the convention is "enlargement." The watchword is that adopted by the southern union for the year, "Enlarge, spare not, lengthen, strengthen." The assembly hymn, "The Kingdom Is Coming," is also that chosen for the year.

The convention was cordially welcomed to Forsyth by Mrs. Charles, wife of Dr. Aquila Charles, president of the college. An official welcome to Forsyth was extended by the Rev. J. H. Clark, who has the unique distinction of being mayor of the town, pastor of the local Presbyterian church and editor of Forsyth's weekly newspaper.

Honor Societies. Recognition was given the honor societies of the union. Of the approximate 2,200 organizations in the state, with a total membership of more than 40,000, A-1 standards have been made by 293 societies—full graded unions, having W. M. S., Y. W. A., G. A., R. A. and Sunbeams, have been maintained by 83 churches. Sixteen of these full-graded unions have A-1 records. The report of Miss Ida V. Rhoad on rural extension work showed a splendid increase in subscriptions to denominational magazines and many new societies organized.

Mrs. A. F. McMahon, treasurer, showed the financial gifts of the past year to the cooperative program to W. M. U. special and seasons of prayer for missions, to total $197,340.20, an increase of $14,124.11 over the preceding year. Among the states of the southern union, rated according to their proportionate gifts, Georgia has risen from seventh place in 1925 to fifth place in 1927.

President's Address. The outstanding feature of Tuesday's program was the inspirational address of Mrs. Neel, president. Mrs. Neel urged expansion and enlargement in the work.

Tuesday evening featured young people's work, with Miss Virginia Bow, state young people's secretary, presiding. This was Miss Bow's inaugural address at a Georgia convention, having but recently been elected to this office.

The evening's program included an organ prelude by Miss Maurine Wagon, Bessie Tift; evening meditation, Miss Frances Ellis, Macon; greetings from the Bessie Tift Y. W. A., Miss Emory Drake, Miss Christine Gannett and Miss Pearl Todd, missionaries, told of young people's work in Cuba and in China.

The climax of the evening was a forceful address by Miss Kathleen Maloney, corresponding secretary of the Woman's Missionary Union of the Southern Baptist convention.

Officers Attending.

Features of all sessions are the organ preludes by Miss Lary Cunyus of Cartersville. Convention singing is being led by Mrs. A. B. Cunyus, also of Cartersville.

State officers in attendance upon the convention are Mrs. W. J. Neel, Cartersville, president; Mrs. George Westmoreland, Atlanta, vice president; Mrs. J. C. Lanier, West Point, vice president; Mrs. E. C. Laird, Atlanta, recording secretary; Mrs. A. F. McMahon, corresponding secretary; Mrs. B. L. Bug, auditor; Miss Virginia Bow, young people's leader. ## GALLON PURCHASES OF PAREGORIC LAID TO U. S. PRISONER

C. O. Dorsett, of a local hotel, does not care for corn, has no use for canned heat and eschews other substitutes for pre-volsted beverages, but is more than partial to paregoric, according to charges lodged against him Tuesday by federal narcotic agents. As a result he is held in $2,000 bond for the federal grand jury, following a preliminary hearing Tuesday before Commissioner E. S. Griffith. Violation of the Harrison narcotic act is alleged.

Dorsett is alleged to have told narcotic officers that he had been addicted to morphine, but shifted from that drug to paregoric every two weeks, according to testimony before Judge Griffith. Officers said that they found eight empty gallon bottles and five pint bottles in Dorsett's hotel room.

When Dorsett appeared at a local drug store and ordered a gallon of paregoric on the pretense that it was for another drug store, the clerk became suspicious when the defendant paid the $3.50 in cash instead of charging it as the other drug store usually did, narcotic officers said. A call to the other store checked up on the fact that the store had not sent for the paregoric, and officers were summoned.

WOMEN TO VOTE ON CLUB OFFICERS

San Antonio, Texas, June 5.—(P)—Religious education in the public schools under the leadership of Professor R. A. Tansoff, professor of philosophy of Rice institute, Houston, addressing the General Federation of Women's Clubs in convention here.

Professor Tansoff pointed out that the various sects all agree that a religious few of life is very important for children. He advocated a careful selection of a course that would avert all of the technical points, a issue between the various sects, but which would give the student a religious balance as well as skill in his craft or profession.

Election Holds Interest

The convention cleared decks today for the one thing of interest that has held the attention of delegates from the first day, the biennial election, an otherwise rather colorless convention. The battle between Mrs. Edward Franklin White, of Indianapolis, and Mrs. John Sippel, of Baltimore, for the presidency, has stood out above every other issue.

Electioneering, beneath the surface, has gone on actively and indications are that the election tomorrow will be close. A total of almost 1,400 credentials have been recognized by the committee on credentials, and of these 587 are from Texas. Illinois is next with 94 and Michigan third with 59.

All of the candidates who had announced for office were named in the nominating committee's report, with the exception of Mrs. George Thomas Palmer, of Springfield, Ill., who withdrew.

Two Are Unopposed. Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole, of Brockton, Mass., was elected first vice president, and Mrs. H. G. Reynolds, of Puluah, Ky., was re-elected treasurer. Both were unopposed.

Mrs. Eugene L. Lawson, of Tulsa, Okla., was elected second vice president, and Mrs. William R. Alvord, of Detroit, and Mrs. Henry C. Puluah, of Iowa, oppose each other for the office of recording secretary.

Mrs. Otto Hahn, of New York, chairman of the federation's division of public instruction, urged the convention to consider the question of Sabbath leave for all school teachers and asked the delegates to come to the next biennial meeting prepared to vote on a resolution advocating such a system in all public schools.

Clear Weather On Way Here, Says Forecast

A temporary rift in the skies of gray was seen for Thursday by C. E. von Herrman, United States meteorologist, on Tuesday when he made up his forecast for today. The rains of the past week probably will clear up some this afternoon and give way to a condition favorable for several days of fine weather, the meteorologist said.

A storm over the Ohio valley is moving to the New England section, and will probably carry Atlanta's rain along with it, the weather man said. He expected the week-end to show up fair and clear, with a bit warmer temperature, though to-day's temperatures are expected to hold the level maintained during the past few days. Temperatures Tuesday ranged between 65 and 70 degrees, while today's are expected to be between 60 and 75 degrees.

A total of 1.31 inches of rainfall will be recorded for June up to 7 o'clock Tuesday morning, with .54 of an inch of this amount during the 24 hours up to 7 o'clock Tuesday morning.

400 WILL CANVASS CITY TODAY TO END D. A. V. CAMPAIGN

More than 400 workers will canvass the city today as the conclusion of the drive for $20,000 to establish a liaison for disabled American veterans. The Atlanta Service Star Legion has volunteered to take over the work for the veterans today and will solicit the citizens on the streets and about the polling booths, giving forget-me-nots to those who contribute to the fund. The money is being raised to insure that claims for compensation by Atlanta and Georgia disabled veterans will be presented properly to the government.

The giving of the flowers to those who contribute today will take the place of the annual forget-me-not sale which is usually held in the fall for the veterans.

More than $2,000 was added to the total by the receipts of the golf match which was held Sunday at East Lake Country club, according to Robert Tyne Jones, Jr., chairman of the drive and the principal figure in the match.

TRAINMEN LODGES WILL HONOR DEAD AT SUNDAY SERVICE

The returns from 1,554 out of 1,754 precincts in the state gave Fountain 77,341; Langston 64,968; Burgwyn 55,500.

Cox, of Al Sirat Grotto, Cleveland, Ohio, is an avowed candidate. He was chairman of the session held at Cleveland last year as is past monarch of the Al Sirat grotto, the third largest in the realm. ## General Education Board Offers Morehouse College $300,000 Endowment Fund

Negro Institution Given Three Years To Raise Equal Sum From Other Friends of School.

Presentation of an endowment of $300,000 to Morehouse college by the General Education board of New York, conditioned upon raising an equal sum by local effort, was disclosed Tuesday by President John Hope in an announcement at commencement exercises of the institution.

The gift is expected to form the nucleus of a campaign to obtain a total endowment of $1,000,000, placing the Atlanta institution among the six leading negro schools of America in financial resources, Dr. Hope stated.

Selection of Morehouse for the large award is believed to be the result of an intensive educational survey of negro schools in the south recently conducted by the general education board. The board, which is one of the world's outstanding benefactors of education, was founded by John D. Rockefeller, and has expended many millions of dollars in this work.

Three Years Given. According to provisions of the $300,000 gift, three years will be given the Atlanta school to raise the money to serve as a permanent endowment for support of the faculty, enabling the college in this way to provide the highest class of instruction for its students, the college president explained. Income from the fund is not to be expended for construction of new buildings or purchase of physical equipment, but entirely upon perfecting the system and quality of instruction.

"It is hoped as a result of the anticipated improvements that Morehouse will prove an even greater asset to the south and nation in sending forth men of character and understanding than it has since its foundation 61 years ago," Dr. Hope stated. The school now has an enrollment of 450 students, including a prep department of more than 100.

"Those who have followed the work of Morehouse college in developing character and leadership in its students will appreciate the opportunity this campaign presents to the public as a means to express its approval of the institution's activities," Dr. Hope stated. Presidents of 10 negro colleges of the south are graduates of Morehouse, four of them being presidents of state-supported institutions. It is this fact, as much as anything else, that has led the general education board to make this unusual offer of assistance in furnishing a permanent endowment for the college."

Eighty Diplomates Given.

At commencement exercises Tuesday, when the general education board's gift was announced, 80 seniors were awarded degrees in bachelor of arts and bachelor of science. Exercises were held in the college chapel with President Florence M. Read, of Spelman college, guest of honor.

The school now has a permanent endowment fund of $320,000, of which $200,000 was given by the general education board some time ago. About 10 years ago the board also contributed $75,000 toward building funds. The $300,000 that must be raised as a result of the board's new offer will make a total endowment fund of $920,000. It is expected that an additional $50,000 will be raised during the three-year campaign to make a total of $1,000,000.

Formulation of a campaign plan and organization to inaugurate the drive for $300,000, on success of which the board's gift depends, are to be undertaken immediately. Dr. Hope stated. Cooperation of the board of trustees, the alumni, students and executives of the college, as well as of friends of the institution and of negro education, is intended to form the backbone of the campaign. The drive will be made throughout the nation, although a large portion of the funds is expected to come from the south.

The initial step in the campaign came immediately following the announcement Tuesday, when Philip M. Davis, president of the Morehouse alumni association, called a meeting of the alumni present at the commencement exercises, who pledged themselves to undertake the raising of $100,000 of the total amount the colored people of Georgia and throughout the south.

Commencement exercises marked the sixty-first anniversary of the college and the thirtieth anniversary of Dr. Hope's connection with the institution. The Rev. Joseph T. Roberts, a prominent South Carolinian, was the first president of the institution, which has had on its board of trustees from the date of its inauguration many influential southern white men. Dr. Carter Helm Jones is the present chairman of the board of trustees, while F. S. Elberidge and Louis D. Newton are well-known Atlantans on the board.

BOTH SIDES REST IN STEWART CASE

Washington, June 5.—(AP)—Both the prosecution and the defense rested their cases today in the trial of Robert W. Stewart, chairman of the board of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana.

Counsel for both sides then went into conference, to prepare for the legal battle which is slated to intervene before the jury is called upon to decide whether the oil man was guilty of a misdemeanor in refusing to answer questions put to him by the senate committee investigating the Continental Trading company. Final arguments are scheduled to get under way tomorrow, but some doubt was expressed that these and the court's instructions will be completed so that the case can go to the jury before Thursday.

Stewart took the stand today in his defense, and testified that he had declined to answer two questions put to him on successive days and had challenged the authority of the senate committee to propound the questions. Except in one instance the oil man's testimony was marked by a smiling urbanity and his replies were brief.

The defense occupied less than four hours, with Stewart as the principal witness. He was followed by Edward J. Behr, president of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, who testified that he had been present on February 3, the second of the two days on which Stewart refused to answer questions relative to any knowledge that he might have had regarding what persons handled the Continental bonds, or to whether he had conversed with Harry F. Sinclair regarding the bonds.

The chief is up in his seventies, but is as spry and active as his man scores of years younger. He has the proud dignity of the chieftain, and will make an impressive figure at the camp fire councils.

Georgia Sponsor Takes Part In Gay Events at Asheville

BY LOUISE DOOLEY.

Asheville, N. C., June 5.—(Special.)—Miss Frances Phillips, of Louisville, sponsor for Georgia, chosen to represent her state at Asheville's rhododendron festival, in progress all night, shared honors with the rhododendron queen, Miss Rose Corrigan, of Asheville, and sponsors for every southern state from West Virginia to Oklahoma in a bridge game given today by the Asheville Woman's club at their handsome clubhouse.

Three hundred ladies were assembled. Miss Phillips, a blond beauty, slender and flowerlike, who is accompanied by her sister, Miss Helen Phillips, is the guest for the week of Grove Park Inn. The queen of the 12 southern states represented also is stopping at the resort hotel.

According to statements made to police by Will Hendricks, negro, who reported that he was an eyewitness to the accident, the car which struck Miss Harris carried license "Georgia 100-C Dealer." An investigation by Officers C. E. McCrary and T. E. Mosley revealed the fact that although this tag had been issued to a local automobile dealer, the identity of the driver at the time of the accident could not be established.

Miss Harris is confined to her bed at her home but her condition is not regarded as serious.

Atlantan Recalls Fall of Meteor On Green Island

Brought back to memory by news of the recent fall of a meteorite on the Georgia coast, the story of how a similar flaming body was seen by himself while on Green Island, near Savannah, during the summer of 1894, was told Tuesday by Dr. S. W. Stiles, formerly of Savannah, who has resided here for the past several years.

Dr. Stiles was on Green Island, 12 miles south of Savannah, and about three and a half miles north of Okeahaw island, when the meteorite fell. In his own words: "I was sitting on the front porch of my house, reading. The night was dark, and I had a lamp sitting on the railing around the porch. Suddenly night was turned to day."

"I immediately rose, thinking that it was one of the negro houses on fire. I looked up, and there, passing overhead, was a tremendous ball of fire, leaving a train of smoke which seemed to miles long. The meteorite appeared to be 'as large as the Kimball House,' and a few moments after attracting Dr. Stiles' attention, it plunged into the waters of Okeahaw sound, about three miles and a half from where he stood. Dr. Stiles said:

"The explosion was terrific, throwing up a column of water several hundred feet high, and shaking plates, cups and saucers from the shelves in the dining room," Dr. Stiles said. The shock of the explosion was not like an earthquake, but more like that of dynamite, he said. This meteorite passed over Richmond, Va., Charleston, S. C., and Savannah, he said.

Contrasting the materialistic American youth of today with his idealistic forebears, former Governor Thomas G. McLeod, of South Carolina, held the attention of Emory university graduates Tuesday morning when he delivered the baccalaureate address before the largest graduating class in the university's history. Two hundred and sixteen degrees were awarded, in addition to three honorary degrees and numerous prizes.

"It seems that the ideals of the American youth are retrograding," said Mr. McLeod. But he pointed out numerous examples of the old type idealistic standard bearers, such as Charles Lindbergh, Bishop Warren A. Candler, former president of Emory, and others, and sought to inspire in his hearers the emulation of the ideals.

The address came as the final feature of Emory university's three-day commencement of the school year, special honors were given at the exercises Tuesday following the address as follows:

THE ELIAS OFFER.

The finance committee of city council has been directed to give immediate and definite consideration to placing in the June budget the item necessary to match the Elias donation for the construction of a moderate rate pay ward unit at Grady hospital. Practically all of the larger cities of this country have such units attached to their charity hospitals, in order to serve a great element of the population that is unable to secure hospitalization at the high-price private institutions, and yet are either not eligible for charity hospitalization, or are too proud to accept it. It is unthinkable that Atlanta will not meet this emergency—and it is an emergency and a vital one—and it is not only in justice and fairness to Mr. Elias, whose offer has been posted for years, to dispose of the matter without delay, but if it is not, it is not probable that the $100,000 donation will be withdrawn. In that event Atlanta will not merely lose the munificent gift of this generous citizen, and will show a lamentable lack of appreciation, but it will be compelled in time to provide all of the funds for such a unit. The demand for it is too pressing to permanently ignore.

Bearing on the subject is a communication, published elsewhere today, from Dr. J. L. Campbell, chairman of the cancer commission of the medical association of Georgia. He discusses the possible deficit that may accrue from the operation of a pay ward at Grady. This phase has been studied with a good deal of care, and it has been expertly stated that such a unit will be self-sustaining even by placing the rates within reach of the masses that are not able to pay much higher rates in private institutions.

But even if there is a deficit, surely Atlanta is big and progressive enough to provide a pressing necessity of this nature, as other cities do, in the interest of conserving the health and man-power of a great element in its citizenry that need hospitalization, and can receive it in no other way.

The building of such a unit will strengthen rather than weaken the many very excellent privately owned and operated hospitals and sanitariums in Atlanta.

THE MILEAGE MUDDLE.

There can be no questioning of the correctness of Judge Hardeman's decision that the state highway board is without authority to add additional mileage to the state's highway system, as adopted and made a part of the state highway act, until the legislature shall have so amended the act as to take in additional mileage.

A law, definite in its provisions, is either a mandate, and means what it says, or it means nothing.

In the latter event it would be just as well that at the next session of the general assembly all statutory laws be repealed, and a constitutional amendment be submitted abrogating the legislative branch of government. Of course such a procedure is out of question. The alternative, however, is to track the law.

The revised highway act of 1925 specifically authorized a state-wide network of highways, to connect every county seat with paved highways, totaling a gross of 6,300 miles. This system embraced all of the inter-state highways, or what is known as the trunk lines.

Before and after the campaign of 1926 the state highway board, with only 38 miles of the mileage granted in the act not taken over by the highway board, the pressure for additional allocations of roads in every section of the state became acute. When the board first broke the ice by "taking over" roads in excess of the legal limitation, the bars were let down, and during the summer of 1926, and since, the board has increased the gross mileage to approximately 7,000 miles.

The board's last certification to the federal road bureau so stated. If the decision of Judge Hardeman holds, and there is every reason to believe that it will, the state highway situation in Georgia will become infinitely more confused than it is at present. The reason is not difficult to comprehend. When the board adds a stretch of road to the state system it assumes the responsibility and the costs of its maintenance. The fact is, therefore, under the Judge Hardeman decision the state has been for several months spending money in the maintenance of and in the grading and surfacing of roads that do not legally belong to the state system. What then is the answer? It is up to the next legislature.

It is granted that most of the roads taken over by the state highway board in excess of the legal limitation should be in the state system. Some perhaps should not be, as many allocations were made during the heat of a political campaign. But certainly some of them should be in the state system. However meritorious the demand, there can be no justification for arbitrary violation of state laws. If the highway board is not to be governed by law, then any other branch of the state government has equal authority to place ahead of the state law arbitrary laws of its own.

The challenge is thus directly placed before the 1929 assembly, to be chosen this September.

The state highway laws need serious revision along several lines. The county aid plan should be prohibited. Only all-weather, durable surfacing should be permitted under any circumstance. Provision should be made for continuous paving, without intermittent sections of mud, and for the completion, at the earliest possible moment, of every mile of the state's system, thereby linking every courthouse in Georgia with ribbons of permanent, lasting road surfacing.

It has been estimated by competent road engineers that temporary, make-shift "paving" costs at a minimum, in the course of five years, 40 per cent more than permanent paving placed in the beginning.

"JACK" SPALDING HONORED.

It is a rare honor that is the recipient of the famous Latetare medal. It is bestowed annually by the Notre Dame university upon a Catholic of national distinction, and is an adaptation of the beautiful old custom of conferring the gilded rose.

The medal has, since the first award in 1842, been bestowed upon such national figures as the late Chief Justice White, Admiral Benson, John G. Milner, the great American historian of the church, and others of like distinction.

The decoration comes this year to one of the most distinguished members of the southern bar, the president of the Atlanta Bar association and an outstanding and useful figure in the civic, cultural, social and religious life of the state. It is an honor worthy bestowed.

Prominent men of the Catholic denomination, including clergy and laymen, will attend the ceremonies from many sections of the country. His home people of Atlanta, regardless of their religious faith, rejoice at the recognition of the services of so good and useful a citizen, and many of the leaders in the economic, professional and religious life of the city of all denominations participate in the ceremony of conferring of this great honor upon one of the state's prominent and most faithful citizens.

There is considerable being said about the immense auditorium built at Houston without any pillars to support the roof. But we hope that provision has been made to keep it firm when the convention begins to raise the roof.

The administration still clings to the belief that the income tax cut is about $25,000,000 in excess of the income. That's all right—misery loves company.

A neighbor of ours has a garden and he is provoked that the president vetoed the farm relief bill. Now he has to hoe his beans and corn instead of playing golf.

No matter what is written in the platforms about the 18th amendment no one will notice any difference in the results.

It is now proven that Senator Hefflin has been talking through his heels.

Procession At Bruges.

Ghent, Mecheln and Ypres have long been known as "the dead cities of Flanders." Bruges even has earned the by-name "La Mort" among certain French writers, who, notwithstanding the delightful life in the atmosphere of mysticism. But it was a very much alive city that celebrated the annual procession of the sacred blood last week. The melancholic life of Bruges suddenly became animated with new vigor that day, the old stones themselves seemed to have awakened as a huge crowd from all parts of Belgium and France crowded through the narrow streets and along the tranquil canals. A simple drop of blood that has been kept in a crystal tube, was exhibited and carried round the city by all the clergy that could attend from the broad land of Flanders and beyond. Besides the gorgeous vestments of the prelates, there were Franciscans in their coarse garb, white-robed Dominicans, and a host of people, who would have thought that it was the start of one of the Crusades, that they were actually taking part in. Through the streets, while all the marvelous chimes and the carillons pealed and boomed the clamor of bronze and silver. D'Annunzio's series such a procession with a reliquary in "Il Fuoco," but in Bruges the affair took on a more solemn and terrible exaltation encountered among the Latins on the Old World's sea. It went off with dignity as a gesture of noble devotion without descending to the level of worship.

From Rome To Florence.

One of the finest little books of travel in Italy is the "From Florence to Rome" by the (G. P. Putnam's Sons). For the voyager who wishes to retrace the author's steps through that narrow, but marvelous bit of country through which the vitality of Rome poured northward, the book will be an excellent guide. And for those who prefer to travel in an armchair, beside a reading lamp, will find it an ideal companion, because it is a vivid sense of personal presence. For example, when Mr. Hutchinson was in the Church of Santa Rosa, at Santa Rosa, the woman came in and knelt down before the shrine, glad evidently, to find it was the same shrine that she had seen in her youth. She stayed quiet for some minutes. And when she left, her face had something in it, like a faint reflection of light, that he had looked before. Had the scorching Santa Rosa put her face on his? The book abounds in such like passages of profound human interest, making delightful and at the same time instructive reading.

Prominent Physician Discusses Pay Ward at Grady

Editor Constitution: I read with a great deal of interest, in your issue of June 4, "High Cost of Sickness," in a recent issue of The Constitution. As I have been greatly interested in the development of Atlanta's Grady hospital, I feel that I cannot allow this opportunity to pass without calling your attention to some facts which are not known to the public.

For the past ten years the subject of our editorial has been the "High Cost of Sickness." As Mark Twain said about the weather, "Nothing has been done about it." With the present high cost of medical care, can anything be done? Will a pay unit at Grady solve the problem for Atlanta's citizens? Will such a unit relieve the crowded conditions now exists at Grady? And last, but by no means least, is the hospital bill the responsibility for the "High Cost of Sickness"? These and many other questions should be carefully considered before the city of Atlanta enters into such a venture.

If the $100,000 gift of Mr. Elias is matched by the city and county, each giving $50,000—a one hundred and fifty-unit unit can be erected. The present high price of labor and material, it costs $2,000 per bed to build and equip a hospital unit. The building cost is a small matter. Such a unit would accommodate twenty-one patients annually per bed, or 2,100 patients, which would save the hospital an average of 17.4 days, making a total of 54,180 hospital days. Annual economic administered each patient costs $2.50 per day; therefore the cost of maintaining these 3,150 patients will be $91,455 annually. I understand that the plan of Kingsford-Smith and his crew is to build a new hospital with 100 beds, at a cost of $2,500 per bed. These prices will add $191,835 to the city's income, provided all the bills are paid. This will still leave a deficit of $100,000—all the bills cannot be paid! For Mr. Elias, who has saved up $100,000 for a rainy day, is now expected to be there three weeks.

Some complications arise and he has to stay six or eight weeks. The cost of the hospital is not to be thrown out and he cannot balance the bill; so the city will lose it. We can reasonably expect that there will be a deficit of $23 1/3 per cent loss, because many thoroughly conscientious people will not pay the normal fee of $100,000 annually to the normal fee of $100,000, thus making a yearly cost to the city of $100,000 for the maintenance of the pay unit of 150 beds. Atlanta is already provided with hospitals where people can get accommodations at any price, so the present number of charity patients will not be diminished.

If the hospital bill the real cause of the "High Cost of Sickness." Let us see Mr. B. is sick. He has a well-defined, easily diagnosed disease, but his neighbor, Mr. A., had an obscure condition which required much study, several consultations and considerable laboratory work before a diagnosis could be made. Mr. B.'s doctor is preparing to proceed with the treatment, when he is stopped. Mr. B. wants to know why such-and-such has not been done. All of the work is done on Mr. A. is demanded. Although it may cost $150 or more and be absolutely unnecessary, Mr. B. wants one of two special tests which add to the cost. "I am sick," he says, "and want the best," but when he gets well, he complains of the "high cost of sickness."

I am not financially interested in any hospital on earth, and never have been. But I know why the people maintain them, for I have had to help pay the deficit. The pay unit at Grady will help many of Atlanta's individuals (myself included) but it will add to the tax burden of all. Will you not urge the finance committee and the county commissioners to hold a public meeting and study the subject from all angles before any action is taken?

Respectfully,

J. L. CAMPBELL, M. D.

Atlanta, Ga., June 2, 1928.

EVERYDAY QUESTIONS

BY DR. S. PARKES CADMAN

Cincinnati, Ohio.

At 24 I married a man of the same age secretly, intending to set up a home in a few months. Nearly a year later, when I decided to study medicine, and has kept on with this, so that now, five years after our marriage, he has lost all interest in me and would welcome a divorce if I pay the charges. Seven years of my life have been wasted. I am very unhappy. What shall I do?

You lengthy letter cannot be quoted in full, but it convinces me that you should no longer sacrifice your life and honor to the designs of this coward and his unworthy mother. Already what loss there is in the difficulty is largely yours and the gain theirs. Moreover, a woman who threatens to divorce her husband if the divorce should appear in the newspapers deserves no consideration. She is, if it needs be, a self-announced liar.

Your husband's insolent demand that you shall pay for the divorce is a despicable insult to you. He tells you to your face of your inferiority to him he completes his exhibition of himself as a contemptible cad. He and his mother should be compelled to disclose their intentions. When they realize that other things of their shameful behavior they may be made amenable to a sensible solution of the problem and force them to act justly in a very painful manner. As I see it, a reputable lawyer is needed to advise you. I can tell you that you need your freedom for the sake of your personal dignity and happiness, and there is no reason why you should not bear the brunt of the situation. By

There Are Many Ways To Make Money But Only Two That Always Work

By Robert Quillen

"Knowledge," said the ancient, "is power." But it isn't the power it once was, for it is common. Today money is power.

The Jewish people are a wealthy people because necessity made them wealthy. They were oppressed, humiliated, denied liberty, denied a voice. Power was held by the nobly born, the church, the politicians, the soldier.

The Jews sought salvation in money, their only hope. They accumulated wealth and wealth brought them liberty and a voice in the world's affairs.

There are but two certain methods of getting wealth, and both are age-old.

Buy an article and sell it at a profit, or manufacture an article and sell it at a profit and keep down the overhead.

The Jews chose the first method. They are merchants the world over—not manufacturers. It is the easier way.

Wanamaker, the great American millionaire philanthropist, made his fortune by buying and selling high.

The Rothschilds were bankers, but their fortune was made by selling goods at a profit. Their greatest single exploit consisted in buying British bonds at two-thirds of their value twenty-four hours before London got the returns from Waterloo.

The other method of getting wealth consists in hiring a $2 man to make a $4 article. It is merchandising, plus manufacturing.

If a $2 man can make a $4 article with your tools, all you need do is drive him to the store and sell the product.

Present-day Americans yearn for easy money and try to outguess Wall street, but the only sure ways to wealth are the old ways. Manufacture something people want or buy and sell something people want. And watch the overhead.

The one who would be greatest must be the servant of all—at a profit.

Health Talks BY DR. WILLIAM BRADY.

AN OUTLINE OF HYGIENE. No. 35—Eating As You Are . . . He Thinks.

In the face of the gloomy deductions many students of health have drawn from the mortality statistics, I believe not only that there is no actual increase in cancer or in heart artery (cardiovascular) diseases, but that in truth these groups of diseases, so prevalent among adults of mature or advanced age, are slowly declining in prevalence as knowledge of hygiene or the ways of health increases and the population grows larger. I have already advised that we do not know enough about cancer or about cardiovascular diseases to explain them clearly or to lay down definite rules for those who would avoid or prevent them. This does not mean that we know nothing about these diseases. Certainly we know enough about cancer to heed the warning signals and apply proper treatment before the disease reaches an advanced stage. Likewise we know enough of heart artery diseases, though far from complete, is sufficient to stimulate anyone who requires such stimulation to obey the laws of hygiene.

The hackneyed saying that a man is as old as his arteries has passed as wisdom ever since the great doctor, who quoted the "doctor's bible." Said he: "Longevity is a vascular question, which has been well expressed in the axiom 'a man is as old as his arteries.' To a majority of men death comes primarily or secondarily through this portal.

His physiological arterio-sclerosis depends, in the first place, upon the quality of arterial tissue (vital rubber) which the individual has inherited, and secondly upon the amount of wear and tear that he has subjected it to. That the former plays a most important role is shown in the cases in which it sets in early in life in individuals in whom none of the recognized causative factors can be found. Thus, for instance, a man of 28 may have the arteries of a man of 60 and in such a case the present vessels as much degenerated as they should be at 80. Entire families sometimes show this tendency.

Dr. Osler was a pessimist—not exactly, but he was a realist. He said that the hardening of the arteries—a tendency which cannot be explained in any way other than that in the mind of the machine had material was used for the tubing. More commonly the arterio-sclerosis results from the bad use of the memory of the beloved teacher.

Dr. Osler was a great teacher and a great example for all young medical students. He was a realist, a pessimist, but he was a realist. He said that the hardening of the arteries—a tendency which cannot be explained in any way other than that in the mind of the machine had material was used for the tubing. More commonly the arterio-sclerosis results from the bad use of the memory of the beloved teacher.

GEORGIA CITIES HIT BY WIND STORMS

wind swept through Americus at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon. A number of fine shade trees were uprooted and destroyed and minor damage was done to property in the western section of the city.

Large trees in the yard of W. H. C. Dudley were uprooted and overturned and in the yard of C. R. Peacock, adjoining, another tree was uprooted, falling against the porch of his home. The damage done is estimated at $150, including losses sustained by telephone and telegraph companies.

MAIL PILOT DESCRIBES FLOODS.

A steady downpour for the past 36 hours along the airway from New Orleans to Selma, Ala., has turned fields into miniature lakes and sent streams throughout the territory to coursing out of their banks. Dick Merrill, pilot of a St. Tammany Gulf coast plane said on arrival here last night. The plane was buffeted by winds and rain throughout the trip. Selma, with visibility extremely poor, Merrill said.

Fields that ordinarily offer an inviting landing place in an emergency today were fit "for only seaplanes," Merrill said, adding: "Streams all along the route were high and full and in some instances running over and if the rain continues, all streams in that section from Anniston, Ala., to New Orleans, will be spreading over the country."

Despite the rain and poor visibility to Selma, Merrill brought his plane to land in the field 15 minutes ahead of schedule time, and said he'd take off this morning for the return trip.

ALABAMA TRAFFIC SERIOUSLY HAMPERED.

Birmingham, Ala., June 5.—(AP)—Rail and highway traffic in Alabama has been seriously hampered and in some cases completely suspended by the unprecedented rains of the last four days. Approximately three inches of rain have fallen in central Alabama in that period, local weather officials said.

Traffic on the Louisville and Nashville railroad between Mobile and Montgomery was delayed from seven to ten hours today through washouts near Cahoon. Traffic in the region around Cahoon, Opp, Morgan, Clay, and over the A. and P. division in Florida into Pensacola.

The Alabama river and other smaller streams in central and southern Alabama were rapidly nearing flood stage today following the heaviest June rainfall in the vicinity of Montgomery since 1892. Montgomery weather officials reported a fall of 2.94 inches of rain during the 24-hour period from 7 o'clock Monday morning to 7 o'clock this morning.

Eight flood gates were opened at the Alabama river company's dam on the Tallapoosa river to take care of the overflow. Ten were opened at the Chattahoochee and six at Lock 12 on the Coosa river.

Flood warnings have been sent out to inhabitants of the lowlands along the Alabama, Coosa and Tallapoosa rivers. The Warrior and Tombigbee rivers were also expected to go out of their banks during the day.

Principal damage from the rains is confined to highways, reports here indicated by a report issued by the Alabama Motorists' association said travel between Nashville and Birmingham had been almost completely stopped by impassable roads and alternate routes via Florence, Huntsville and Guntersville were being made.

The Chattanooga-Birmingham road was reported closed at the Collinsville down Lookout mountain to Gadsden.

Another highway hard hit by the heavy rains was that between Meridian, Miss., and Birmingham. The Tombigbee river ferry crossing at Gadsden was virtually impassable, as was also a stretch between Eutaw and Tuscaloosa.

FOUR RAILROADS ARE WASHED OUT. Mobile, June 5.—(AP)—Four railroads entering Mobile are washed out. Lines suggested and cut in the contest of the highway and the railroad. The Louisville & Nashville main line is washed out at Castleberry, Ala., and beyond. The Mobile & Ohio road is washed out at Fruitdale and north of that place for several hundred feet.

The Southern Railway, which has been reported washed out at several places in Baldwin, Escambia, Washington, Clark and Choctaw counties. Brevort was reported very high, but it was believed that there would not be a repetition of the floods of last month.

The Gulf, Mobile and Northern railroad is the only one operating daily as a result of rains during the past seven to 10 hours late. This road is in danger of being washed out near Wilmer on the Alabama-Mississippi line where Dog River is at the highest peak since the storm of 1906.

RESIDENTS FLEE FROM LOWLANDS. New Orleans, June 5.—(AP)—Lowland residents of southeastern Louisiana, central and southern Mississippi and southern Alabama today are fortifying themselves against devastating flood waters of scores of small rivers and creeks out of their banks as a result of rains during the past 48 hours that ranged in severity from 2 to 12 inches.

Transportation by railroad and highway was at a standstill in many sections of the three states, while communication was cut off in some places. Train service over several lines in Mississippi was hazardous, some railroads suspending operations or routing their trains in a circuitous manner to reach terminals.

slip, routed an attempt, led by former Governor Sheldon of Nebraska, to unseat him and keep his group of followers from reaching the convention.

Hoover followers were jubilant tonight at the trend of the vote, and the fact that after voting with Charles D. Hill, of New York, on several occasions to deny Hoover delegates seats, Chairman Butler, close friend of President Coolidge, joined with the cabinet officer's forces when a vote was taken on one of the Louisiana contest.

Georgia Senators Active During Session of Congress

Harris Will Make Trip to Houston Convention as Delegate; Much Accomplished by Him.

Washington, June 5.—(Special).—In excellent health after one of the busiest seasons in his political career, Senator William J. Harris is preparing to return to Georgia for the summer recess.

Leaving Washington about June 10, Senator Harris will go to Atlanta and as chairman of the Georgia delegation to the democratic national convention, will be joined by other delegates who will travel to Houston on a special train. Following the convention, the senator will be joined at Dillard, Rabun county, Georgia, by his wife and daughter and several well-known members of the family and will spend the summer in the north Georgia town.

Address Audiences. As has been his custom for several years, Senator Harris will address audiences in the north Georgia towns during sessions of court beginning in the fall and continuing until he returns to Washington early in December for the second session of congress.

Unusually busy by virtue of his high place on the appropriations and commerce committee, Senator Harris nevertheless set something of a record for himself in the session just closed by attending every meeting of the senate except one and was absent from the capital only one day, when he went to Gettysburg, Pa., with Congressmen M. C. Tanner, of the seventh district, to deliver an address in connection with the transfer of a cannon to the citizens of Marietta, Ga. The cannon was used by Georgia Militia academy cadets during the war between the states.

Many Appropriations. In his work on the appropriations committee, Senator Harris obtained many appropriations for use in Georgia and the south, notably in agricultural work. He was highly successful in obtaining congressional bills introduced by Georgia congressmen, and he and Senator George cooperated in every matter of interest to the state.

For the first time in several sessions, the commerce committee demanded even more of the senator's time. He was called upon to meet daily for more than two months and often in the evening. As reported out of committee and passed, the bill was given to the development of the greatest project undertaken by the government since the building of the Panama canal and an expenditure as large.

A subject mentioned frequently by senators and congressmen from other states was the harmony and mutual interest argument among the Georgia delegation in the house and senate. A spirit of co-operation prevailed throughout the session, the result of which legislative and departmental business highly beneficial to the state was transacted.

That he was judging the contests on their merits and that presidential candidacies carried no weight in his decisions.

On the roll call to seat the four Louisiana delegates at large committee to Hoover, the vote was 59 to 41. Cohen led the fight to put in an instructed "big four," but he got some support from the first Louisiana delegate, Kuntz being instrumental in having a contest against him withdrawn, and later Cohen closed that he intended to support Curtis, of Kansas, at the outset of the convention.

The other non-Hoover man who landed a place on the Louisiana delegation was J. H. Lowery, of the sixth district. He was defeated in the contest of the Hoovers, but he was seconded a motion by Hill, of Louisiana, that Kuntz be instrumental in having a contest against him withdrawn, and later Cohen closed that he intended to support Curtis, of Kansas, at the outset of the convention.

Howard Wins in Mississippi. The Perry Howard delegation of Mississippi was recognized by acclamation, after a bitter argument between his faction and that led by Sheldon.

Spokesmen for the Sheldon group contended that Howard was not a Mississippi general in Washington, was not seeking to build up a strong republican party in Mississippi and that he was a member of the democratic party. Democratic leaders that he would stay out of state and local politics and accept advice from them in federal patronage matters.

T. J. Willis, a Hattiesburg attorney, brought the name of Pat Harrison, one of the democratic senators from Mississippi, into the argument by declaring Harrison had sent word home from Washington that he wanted "the policy of the status quo in Mississippi maintained."

Texas Comes Up Today. There was a titter when Willis declared that if Howard were ousted the republicans might carry Mississippi next fall.

Howard wound up the argument with a personal appeal to his committee colleagues. He charged that his opponents were not bona-fide republicans, and reminded the committee that he had spent much of his time delivering speeches for the party in localities where his aid was helpful.

By clearing away the Mississippi contest before adjourning early tonight, the committee hoped to get to the dispute from Texas tomorrow. An attempt is being made to send a complete delegation, pledged to Hoover from that state.

Georgia Still on List. In two days the republican national committee will be getting through the convention delegate contests on its calendar. Chairman Butler announced tonight he would adjourn the hearings by night.

Contests ruled on thus far are: Florida—four delegates and five district delegates. Total 9. Kentucky—First district—one delegate. Georgia—Fifth district—one delegate. Louisiana—Total 12. Mississippi—Four at large and eight district—total 12.

Those still on the calendar for review are: Georgia—First and seventh districts—total 2. South Carolina—Four at large. Tennessee—Third and fourth districts—total 3. Texas—Four at large and 22 district delegates—total 26. Porto Rico—Two delegates.

An attempt probably will be made to contest the certified delegation from the District of Columbia, but no indications that the contests from South Carolina and from the third Tennessee district, the latter involving two seats, will not be pressed.

Army and Navy Planes To Attend Dedication of 'Redfern' Field

Redfern field, new airport of Brunswick, Ga., which will be dedicated with an air derby to be held Friday and Saturday. Many of the country's foremost aviators are to take part in the program for the two days and huge crowds are foreseen from all parts of Georgia, Florida and other southeastern states.

Brunswick, Ga., July 5.—(Special.)—The U. S. army will be represented at the big air derby dedicating Redfern field, St. Simons Island, Friday and Saturday, by a Douglas observation plane flying from Maxwell field early Friday. Three UO-1 planes from Pensacola station will be the U. S. navy's representative in what promises to be the most eventful air derby held in Georgia.

Entries and inquiries from commercial and private plane owners are still coming in to the air derby committee of the Young Men's club and many will be here who enter too late to be listed in the attractive official souvenir program which will list all events and time of their occurrence as well as listing all planes, aviators, aerial performers, by distinctive numbers so that all spectators may know and recognize every plane in the air. The big field has had careful grooming every day for the past several weeks, tractors, harrows, mowers and watering carts covering ever foot of ground. It will be in fine shape for the opening and dedication and its 65 acres will prove as fine in accommodating landings and take-offs as they appear distinct and beautiful from the air in the sylvan setting of historic St. Simons.

Signs for Airmen.
For the benefit of visiting airmen from the west, southwest and north, huge signs have been painted on one of the 300-foot gas tanks of the Atlantic Refining company, atop the National bank building and other roofs of the city. The regulation circle and name appears in white in the center of the field, while the runways are also marked in white shell. Practically every portion of the field may be used but the runways have been especially sodded and rolled.

Parking space for thousands of visiting automobiles have been provided in the immediate vicinity of the field. A field hospital tent with trained nurses and surgeons in constant attendance, all adequately equipped, is also a feature of the care being exercised in the conduct of the derby.

Brunswick hotels and restaurants are preparing for the thousands of visitors expected, while a local transportation committee is taking care of provisions for seeing that every train arrival for the two days is provided with sufficient busses and automobiles to insure all reaching the field in time for the opening each day, the eighth and ninth.

Social Events.
Two outstanding social events in honor of the visiting airmen, their aides and invited guests will be a dinner and dance at the new Glynn County casino Friday night and an invitation dance given by the Sea Island company at its magnificent Spanish-type casino on Glynn island, which will be opened for this one night a week in advance of its formal opening. This was announced today by Paul J. Varner and Charles Ridding, of the Sea Island company.

The commissioners of roads and revenue here today made an appropriation for the occasion, while the city commission practically agreed some two weeks ago to cooperate with the county in support of the air derby. All Brunswick is anxiously awaiting the eighth and ninth as gala days in local history.

LUMBER DEALERS' TAX TESTED IN BIBB COURT

Constitutionality of that section of the general tax act applying to lumber dealers is tested in local proceedings brought in the Bibb county superior court by three lumber dealers of that county, it was announced Tuesday by Attorney General George M. Napier. The companies are seeking to restrain General William A. Wright, state comptroller, from collecting the taxes imposed by the act on lumber dealers.

The attorney general's office will proceed to prepare a defense on behalf of the state, it was said, June 23 having been set by Judge Malcolm T. Jones as the date for a hearing on a permanent injunction. Meanwhile, the comptroller and Usher T. Winsett, Bibb tax collector, are temporarily restrained from issuing tax fi fas, against the property of the three petitioners, the attorney general said.

Fowler Lumber company, Massee & Pelton Lumber company and Jeffers-McElreath Manufacturing company, the petitioners, charge in their petition that paragraph 66 of section 2 of the general tax act of 1927, is unconstitutional in that it is "vague, uncertain and indefinite."

It is alleged that the provision graduates the tax upon lumber dealers according to the population of cities "near" which the businesses are conducted, and that this is too vague to determine who is "near" a city of given population and who is not.

It is further alleged that the petitioners are not "dealers" in the meaning of the law, since their sales of lumber are merely incidental and necessary to their regular business of lumber manufacturers.

FROM Maine to California millions are enjoying today the supreme achievement of the makers of NuGrape. Truly this is a gala day in the history of beverage making. It marks the final victory of science over the ancient King of all Fruit Juices . . . King Grape Juice.

World famous chemists have been telling us for years it couldn't be done . . . the difficulties were too great! Fermentation . . . price of grape juice . . . variation in flavor—all these things they said made it impossible to produce an exquisite, carbonated soda with the flavor of the grape and sell it for 5c.

Nevertheless we've done it—by creating and perfecting a secret new process of concentrating grape juice. To this concentrated juice is added tartaric fruit acid (which itself is a by-product of grapes); pure cane sugar; carbonated water and harmless U. S. Government certified food color, such as is used in making candies, ice-cream and hundreds of other wholesome food products. These ingredients and no other give NuGrape its wonderful flavor of the grape and appearance.

Never before has there been a carbonated drink like this introduced to the American people. One sip will convince you of just how much better it is than synthetic, grape-flavored beverages. NuGrape soda has a smooth piquancy of flavor . . . a delightful, bracing tartness about it that only the flavor of the grape can give.

Try your first bottle today and if you don't think it's better than any synthetic grape drink you ever tasted . . . write us, enclosing crown, and we'll gladly refund you the small purchase price.

Make sure though you get genuine NuGrape in our distinctive, trade-marked bottle.

Crackers Swamp Vols By 14-3 Score To Win Second Straight

Cullop Gets Third Homer In Two Days

Poole and Dudley Also Knock Home Runs; Crackers Gather 20 Bingles.

Nashville, Tenn., June 5.—(Special.)—Those Crackers were at it again this afternoon. They pounded and banged away with much force in the ball to better out 19 hits and win themselves the first game of a scheduled double-header by the score of 14 to 3, which to anyone's mind should be very, very convincing.

The way Atlanta hit the ball was convincing. Of course, there were more home runs. Nick Cullop added one today to his pair of Monday. Old Jim Poole, who has been batting along at a rapid clip, got one, and so did young Tilse Dudley, who pitched for Atlanta, and did very well at it.

It seems, from the way Atlanta has gone about winning these past two games, that something has been done about that Vol jinx, which kept the Crackers from winning for so long. Possibly Atlanta will win the two-bill slated for Wednesday, this afternoon's second game having been rained out. In fact, anything's liable to happen now, for an event took place this afternoon.

A Cracker pitcher started a game—and finished it. Young Mr. Dudley held the Vols well in check while his mates were pounding away and pitched a convincing sort of ball game. The victory put Atlanta into a tie with Chattanooga for cellar position.

Nick Cullop cracked out his eighth home run toward the shank end of the game to place him one behind the league-leader, Brooks, of Nashville.

Nashville got one in the third on Götter's double and Glaser's single. Clise Dudley and Norman Glaser were the rival slayers.

The Crackers broke into the run column when they scored two runs in the third inning. This was the first scoring of the game. After Niehoff flied to Wade, Angley hit a high fly that fell safe inside the infield. Dudley struck out. Zoller singled to right. Angley going to third. Zoller went to second on Lewis' fumble. West doubled to right, scoring Angley. Zoller, Gilbert was safe and West went to third when Götter threw wide to first. Poole grounded out to Götter.

The Vols came back with a rally but were able to score but one run. Götter doubled to left center. Flippin grounded out. Niehoff to Poole. Götter going to third. Glaser singled to left, scoring Götter. Lewis flied to Zoller. Lovelace popped to Jones.

There was no more scoring until the Crackers' half of the sixth frame. Poole hit the first pitch over the right-

Hahn at Peak For Olympics

Boston, June 5.—(P)—Lloyd Hahn, America's best prospect in the Olympic 800 and 1,500-meter races, has reported to his coach, Jack Ryder, in excellent physical condition.

Though Hahn had not raced since March and had spent 48 hours on the train which carried him here from Nebraska home, he ran a quarter mile in 51 seconds. Then he jogged a mile and a half.

"Hahn is our best Olympic bet," Ryder said, "and there is no reason why he can't win both of his races at Amsterdam. I have protected him because I am positive of it now, after watching Lloyd perform. Why, he is almost in shape for any kind of competition."

The Nebraska flier will work out daily under Ryder and his first race probably will be in the eastern Olympic tryouts at New York on June 16. Ryder believes that he needs only two or three races to get in perfect condition.

Rolling Stocking Wins at Latonia

New York, June 5.—(P)—Rolled Stocking, with Crump in the saddle, won the Inaugural handicap, $5,000 added, for three-year-olds and up, at Latonia today. It was three horses racing. Genial Host finishing second and Royal Julian third and last.

Rolled Stocking covered the mile and a sixteenth in 1:50.

The speed handicap, $2,500 added for three-year-olds, feature at Belmont park, saw William M. Zeigler's Polydor carry 122 pounds to a head victory over Old Dutch with Byrd third. Polydor won by 1 1/2 lengths.

The time for the five and a half furlongs was 1:05. The chestnut son of Golden Broom-Polly Ann earned $8,650 for his owner. The third race, the pennant for three-year-olds and up went to Rolling Player with Sun Forward second and Nowele third. The mile was covered in 1:40 3/5. Both features were four-horse races.

The feature at Arlington proved to be the first race which went to Polo Star, the winner paying $100.12 for a $2 ticket. Another long shot came home in the third at Latonia, Padona paying $123.44 for $2.

HAWK-EYEING SPORTS

BY DICK HAWKINS

"Whiz" Shooting.

The world's open championship at the "Whiz" traps has developed into the feature event of the Georgia state shoot at the Peachtree Gun club.

And such a development is not surprising. Any child who is accustomed to bread and butter will trade for traps and moccasins any time. So it is with trap shooters. The shooters are entirely accustomed to the bread and butter of ordinary single targets, but they have never seen anything like the bread and moccasins of the "Whiz" traps. This is not to say that the new layout is better than the old style of shooting. Such a comparison would be as unfair as a comparison between chicken and roast beef. Both are palatable and both have their place in the gastronomic picture, but there is little similarity except that each is edible.

So with the "Whiz" layout. It has its purpose just as much as the sparring partner has his place in the training camp along with the punching bag and the skipping rope. From a standpoint of shooting in the field the "Whiz" is the sparring partner in the training camp.

It was amusing to watch the uninitiated in the "Whiz" traps Tuesday. They stood at the posts and watched the elusive targets fly at all angles with a very small casualty list. The tower birds found the visiting shooters at a complete loss and the right-angle birds were little better.

There were a few notable exceptions to this rule, and one of these exceptions is a youngster who promises to be one of the finest clay pigeon shots in the country in a few years. His name is J. W. Peterman and he hails from the ancient city of Charleston. Out of his first 25 shots at the "Whiz" traps he broke 20 clays. That doesn't sound so remarkable, but take our word that it is. Peterman is a youth in age and in experience at the traps, but such experts as Arthur Cusaden, professional, believe that he is one of the greatest bets in the future market. He proved his ability to handle a gun at the "Whiz" traps Tuesday.

Shooting at "Whiz" is something of a gift. The fact that a man is a fine shot up on the hill does not mean that he can break the clays down in the field. A fine example of this was the performance of H. E. Johnson, of Haines City, Fla. Harry broke 199 targets out of a possible 200 in the championship flight and only failed to win the state title because the race is open to Georgia shooters only. But down in the valley Tuesday he broke just 17 out of his first 25 birds.

That is nothing to his discredit. The "Whiz" layout is a lesson in field shooting. It has no relation to the traps on the hill where targets come at the beck and call of the shooter and come from the same point at every call.

It was interesting to watch the visitors on the sidelines at the "Whiz" traps Tuesday. When the competition started there were but four squads ready for action, but another squad of shooters were watching the festivities from the benches. Before the first gun had finished every man in the audience who could handle a gun had called for shells and the battle was on. They all fell for it.

The "Whiz" layout is the brain child of Harold McKenzie, president of the Peachtree club, and it proves conclusively his right to be called a genius in the trap-shooting world.

"A Genius."

Harold McKenzie is a genius in more ways than one. He is not only the new Georgia state champion, but he acquired this title under untold strain. He shot his way to the title while his mind was weighted down with the details of running a big shoot.

That Harold is a host among hosts was evidenced by a remark passed Tuesday by Arthur Cusaden, veteran professional, who has attended shoots from the coast of Maine to the shores of the Gulf and from the Atlantic seaboard to the slopes of the Pacific. Arthur spoke thusly: "Harold McKenzie is the best host I have ever seen at a shoot. He just doesn't forget anything. He anticipates every wish and nothing need be asked, for it is already done." Arthur's opinion is based upon the history of the shoot. There is no hitch in the proceedings—everything runs off like the well-known clock works.

TECH LIKED HELEN MISSING IN COLLEGIATE IN DOUBLES AT CHICAGO AT WIMBLEDON

Chicago, June 24.—(P)—Winners of more than 20 conference championships will compete for the national collegiate track and team title on Soldiers' field Saturday.

While Stanford and Illinois are the outstanding favorites to win the national championship, Georgia Tech, Kansas, Missouri valley titleholders; Rice, winner in the southwestern conference; Washington, winner of the Pacific coast meet in the absence of Stanford, and Marquette, which won the central intercollegiate at Milwaukee last week, will be strong contenders.

The entry list for the national championships, which will be an official Olympic team tryout, soared to 75 yesterday when Gonzaga, Ohio State and the University of Oregon entered. Nine big ten teams have entered, Iowa being the only absentee. Twenty-eight states will be represented at the meet, with more than 250 athletes.

Only four of the individual champions of last year's meet will return Saturday to defend their titles. They are Ed Hamm, of Georgia Tech, who won the broad jump last year with a leap of 24 feet 1 inch; Broegmueler, of Northwestern, who won the pole vault with a 13-foot 3-inch jump; Brix, of Washington, who won the shot put with a heave of 44 feet 3 3/8 inches; and Pilling, of Utah, who took the javelin throw last year with a distance of 198 feet 8 inches. All of their marks have been bettered in this year's outdoor competition.

State Senator Charles A. Rawson, of Iowa, will referee.

Hal McKenzie Wins State Singles Title At Trap Shoot

Local Star Breaks 196 Out of 200

Deposes W. H. Lanier, of Augusta, as State Champ; Floridian Shoots 199.

BY WHITNER CARY.

Harold McKenzie, finishing his string of 200 targets with a burst of inspired shooting that broke the last 18 straight to give him the impressive score of 196, blazed his way through the misty atmosphere enveloping the Peachtree trap club Tuesday to the singles throne room of the trap-shooting fraternity of the sovereign state of Georgia. This magnificent score by the great Atlanta shooter proved one target too many for Harry Lanier, of Augusta, the 1922 titleholder, whose 195 gave him the runner-up honor as he gracefully made his exit from the royal heights. H. T. Johnson, of Haines City, Fla., with 190, was high gun in this event, but the fact that he lives outside the state brings his brilliant achievement only honor and glory with no championship.

While Lanier was deposed from his throne in the singles, he showed clearly by breaking 49 out of 50 in the championship doubles, the first half of which was shot Tuesday, that he is a dangerous contender for this title. His sensational mark tops the entire field and puts him four targets in the lead of Sam DuBoise, his nearest Georgia rival, for this honor. Lanier also accounted for the high gun trophy for the second day in a class. His 244 out of 250 gives some idea of how he was going and supplies added honor to McKenzie's defeat.

McKenzie's great triumph was one of the most sensational and marked as keen a race as a state shoot has ever witnessed. When lunch time arrived and the first hundred had been shot, Lanier by a most startling showing in running straight was leading the Atlanta man by two targets. Lanier started the afternoon's work by breaking the first 13 to give him a straight run of 113, noting that in any circles would be most impressive. At this juncture his aim seemed to falter just a wee bit and he lost another on the first trap. He went straight on No. 2, but missed two on No. 3 and another on the last trap to give him 105.

McKenzie, who started the afternoon's hundred two down, went straight at the first trap and dropped one at the second and followed this miscue by losing his second on the third trap. He was then confronted with the Herculean task of running the remaining 48 without a break to top the title. His trusty fowling piece never obeyed his steady aim and unerring eye to any better extent than it did on those last 48 targets, the breaking of which gained him the title.

Other Performances.
Tied with Lanier at 105 came D. H. McCullough, the Charlotte crack, and T. K. Lee, the Birmingham star. Two targets back of these were Inman Gray, whose 193, while not getting him the title, was a most worthy performance. The rest were strung out along the wayside all way down to below 150.

The concluding feature of the second day saw the brethren descend to the valley and get a crack at the whit targets in friendly competition that

'Big Six' Memorial Presented; 'Matty' Honored by Moguls

Lewisburg, Pa., June 5.—(AP.) Christy Mathewson, the "Big Six" of baseball, was hailed in death today by the game's highest authority, Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, as the "man who made baseball the truly national game it is today."

The commissioner of baseball paid tribute to "Matty" at the presentation to Bucknell university of the Christy Mathewson memorial gateway to the memorial stadium. The ceremony took place in the presence of a notable assemblage of baseball leaders, many of whom were personal friends of Mathewson.

They came from the sport centers of the nation to honor "Matty" and were joined here by the alumni and faculty of Bucknell, from which the "big six" graduated before he achieved greatness on the baseball diamond. It was Bucknell alumni "homecoming" day and several thousand stood assembled before the gateway, which the tribute of Judge Landis and others.

"Matty's" grave in the Lewisburg cemetery, not far from the campus, was covered with floral tributes. The first act of President John A. Heydler, of the National league, after arriving here was the placing of a wreath on the grave and the whole party of baseball visitors did him further honor at a luncheon at Mathewson's fraternity house, Phi Gamma Delta.

Mathewson's widow and son, Christy Mathewson, Jr., attended the ceremonies.

resulted in McKenzie emerging the winner. This feature of the shoot brought forth considerable enthusiasm and from the interest aroused it is certain that this form of shooting is going to be extremely popular.

Wednesday, the concluding day of this most enjoyable and successful shoot, will see the final hundred in the class championships shot; the final 25 pair in the state championship doubles and the handicap event of 100 targets.

Coolness and comfort at little cost

Have you tried this wonderful loaf of richer bread?

So MANY people are changing to Southern Bread! Even those who have been most insistent on making their own at home. For they find Southern Bread so tender and delicious, so fresh and so rich—so exactly what they and their children want in bread, that the trouble and cost and risk of home baking seem no longer worth while.

Southern Bread is made with the ingredients you yourself would buy. You can buy them at your grocer's—the same shortening, the same yeast, the same beautifully white flour. But probably even you are not in the habit of lavishing so much milk on your bread as goes into Southern Bread. That is what makes it so rich.

Your grocer receives a fresh supply twice every day. Try this bread that everybody likes.

Turman has returned from Alexandria, Va., where she was principal speaker at the eighth annual convention of the Virginia League of Women Voters, making her first speech after being made third regional director, including the states extending from the District of Columbia to Louisiana, making a total of nine states under her directorship.

Mrs. Turman discussed the general apathy throughout the country of women in exercising the right to vote, and urged every member of the league to carry home a message impressing the women of the importance of the ballot. She stated that "the greatest menace in this country was not foreign influence," but the indifference of the free-born American citizen at the ballot box. Mrs. Turman quoted a slogan used at an election she witnessed, "Your vote helps two, your country and you."

BURGESS CHILDREN'S STORIES

FARMER BROWN'S BOY SEES THE EGGS AGAIN.

By Thornton W. Burgess.

There is an old saying that familiarity breeds contempt. That is not true by any means. It sometimes breeds respect, a very deep respect. It was so with Farmer Brown's boy and Mrs. Longbill the Woodcock.

Mrs. Longbill had actually allowed Farmer Brown's boy to put his hand on her back as she sat on her nest. Now, that was familiarity. It was most decidedly familiarity. But the result of it was respect on both sides. Mrs. Longbill respected Farmer Brown's boy for not taking advantage of her, and Farmer Brown's boy respected Mrs. Longbill for her good sense and the confidence she was giving him. He didn't take advantage of it. He was content to just stroke her. He got her so used to it that she didn't mind it at all. If the truth be known, she rather enjoyed it.

Now, Farmer Brown's boy is like every other boy—he has curiosity. He had seen Mrs. Longbill's eggs just once. That was when he had first found the nest and had frightened her from it. He wanted to see them again. But Mrs. Longbill had no intention of showing them to him again.

On the third day he came as usual, quietly, always moving slowly and gently. It seemed to him there was a welcoming gleam in the big eyes of Mrs. Longbill. He stooped over and stroked her. He tickled her in the back of the neck. For the first time she moved. She lifted her head. Then Farmer Brown's boy very gently slid his hand back and partly under her. Still she didn't leave the nest. He pushed her ever so gently. She got to her feet. But even then she didn't fly. No, sir, she didn't fly. She walked away. Farmer Brown's boy made no motion to frighten her, but watched her walk away and disappear among the alders.

"Well, what do you know about that?" exclaimed Farmer Brown's boy. "I actually had to push her from her nest. I never saw anything like it! I just wish some of those fellows who are so fond of shooting Woodcock in the fall could have seen this. I can't imagine anyone wanting to kill a bird after having won her confidence in this way. Well, I won't bother the little lady any longer. Probably she won't come back until I am here. I suspect she's a little unsettled in her mind by having me push her off her nest. So I'll go away and give her a chance."

This Farmer Brown's boy did. He was satisfied now that he had seen the eggs once more. He would not again attempt to see them. And as for Mrs. Longbill, she was a little upset for a while. She couldn't quite understand it. She was worried, until creeping back where she could see the nest, she saw the eggs undisturbed. "Now, what did he do that for?" thought Mrs. Longbill. "Why did he push me off my nest? He didn't take those eggs. Perhaps he just wanted to see if they had hatched yet. I guess that must have been it. Well, I hope he won't try it again. He'll get me a little nervous if he does. I can stand a lot, but there is such a thing as too much."

Now what did he do that for? thought Mrs. Longbill.

Now, all the time Longbill had kept out of sight. He didn't share Mrs. Longbill's confidence. Not once had Farmer Brown's boy seen him. But other eyes in the little swamp had watched Farmer Brown's boy come and go and wondered what it was all about. The wonder was that the secret of Longbill and Mrs. Longbill was kept for sharp eyes and keen noses searched to find out why Farmer Brown's boy came to the swamp every day.

The next story: "Longbill's Babies."

RELIEVED CAUSE OF SEVERE HEADACHES

Lady Says Quick Relief From a Painful Symptom of Constipation Followed Her Use of Black-Draught

Baton Rouge, La.—Many a man or woman has found relief from headache when a condition of constipation was the underlying cause, by taking a simple, powdered preparation of selected medicinal leaves and roots, known far and wide as Theford's Black-Draught. It has been in successful use for more than eighty-seven years, with constantly increasing popularity, by reason of its own value.

Here is an instance of how Black-Draught proved of benefit to a Louisiana lady:

"About two years ago I was suffering from constipation," writes Mrs. F. Guidry, of 637 Middle Street, this city.

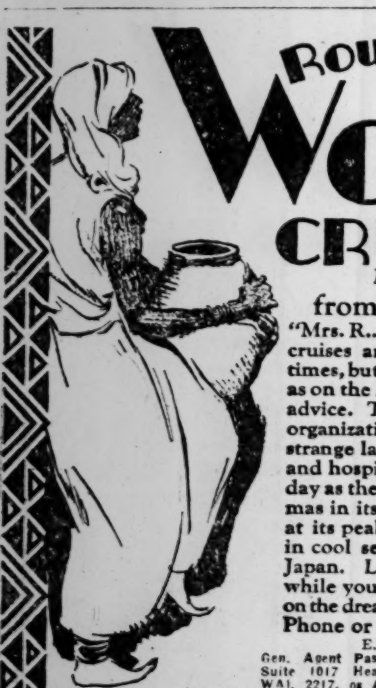

"I would have severe headaches and would have to stay in bed a day or two at a time. I tried different remedies; did not get relief.

"I read of Black-Draught, and decided to try it, and have never been sorry I did, for it gave me relief quicker than anything I have ever tried.

"And now, whenever I feel the least symptom (of constipation) I take Black-Draught, and that keeps off the headaches. I am much better since I began taking it, and I gladly recommend it to my friends."

Good for children, grown men and women, and those of advanced age.

JURYMEN SELECTED TO TRY SLICER TODAY

After several hours had been consumed in completing a jury to try S. Slicer, president of the defunct Colonial Trust company, on a charge of fraudulent insolvency, Judge Virgil B. Moore's division of Fulton superior court was adjourned Tuesday until this morning.

While Slicer and T. J. Norman, vice president and treasurer of the trust concern, were jointly indicted, defense counsel elected to have the cases considered separately.

The state has summoned more than 100 witnesses, including depositors and clients of the company. Indications are the trial will occupy the remainder of the week.

The two men were accused in 17 indictments found by the grand jury several months after the trust company collapsed in September, 1926, on counts ranging from larceny after trust to misdemeanor.

Approximately $350,000 was lost by depositors and clients in the failure, investigators say. The state's case is in charge of Solicitor General Bartley Boykin and Assistant Solicitors Walter LeCraw and John H. Hudson.

Slicer was represented by the firm of Colquhoun & Conyers, Samuel L. Olive and Don K. Johnston, while Norman's counsel was Samuel D. Hewlett.

Monroe Cooper, negro, who lives at that address, was taken into custody by the officers. Officer Sinyard said he and his partners had been trying for several months to locate the hiding place of the whisky. Tuesday they found the underground "trap," with the entrance in the chicken house, and made the arrest.

Her Dreadful Past

Convicted, an outcast, marked for life with the brand of patricide.

.... The amazing true story of a girl patricide

PERHAPS you recall reading in the newspapers the case of Gretchen, the girl Sphinx. It was the piteous, sordid story of a girl who put poison in her father's coffee and then, through a long drawn-out trial, steadfastly refused to utter a single word in her own defense, preferring to take whatever punishment the court decreed rather than describe to the jury the terrible details of the soul-destroying life he had forced upon her.

You read of her conviction and incarceration and there, so far as the public was concerned, the story ended.

But really it was only the beginning—the opening episode of one of the most amazing human dramas ever enacted.

In prison Gretchen became a human automaton: she performed her duties in utter silence; she would not talk with the other girls nor with the attendants; nothing amused her, nothing interested her; she kept completely to herself, rigidly, dreadfully alone—an outcast marked for life with the brand of patricide.

Then through a twist of circumstance Mary Howard, instructor in an ultra-exclusive girls' seminary, came to the prison to teach the rebellious incorrigibles herded within its walls.

Her heart went out to the little devil-haunted, soul-frozen daughter of the slums.

She was kind to her, worked with her, encouraged her, tried in every way to make her feel that she was not a pariah but a girl like other girls.

At first Gretchen feared and distrusted her. Later she thawed a little. And when one night in the seclusion of Miss Howard's room, the dam of her emotions burst and with her head in the kindly teacher's lap, her body wracked with sobs, she told for the first time the dreadful story which, had she told it to the jury, would probably have resulted in her acquittal.

Her story appears in True Story Magazine for July as told by the woman who won her confidence and in the end saved her from herself. It is a complete and detailed account of Gretchen's early years, the events leading up to her dreadful crime, her trial, imprisonment, eventual parole and the glorious success she is now making of her life. You have never read a story like it and probably never will again. Terrible in places but with a supremely happy and satisfying ending it will make you shudder and smile through a mist of tears. It is entitled "Out of the Slums" and appears complete in the July issue of True Story now on sale.

THE GUMPS—KNOWLEDGE IS POWER

Three Generations

By WARWICK DEEPIG

SYNOPSIS.
Old John Pym, formerly a bookkeeper in London and later in Winterbourne, is serving as a porter in an inn at Castle Creek when his son, Conrad, sees him there. He has been estranged from both his sons since the beginning of the war and they have lost track of him. Conrad hastens to tell his brother, Pym, that he has seen his father. Pym's son, Lance Pym, had been living in the grandeur of the meeting when his parents at Cambridge he takes a room in London, and after gaining his father's reluctant consent, and a small allowance he devotes himself to writing. In London Lance meets and is attracted to Olive Gadsden, a musician.

Mary Merris, a friend of old Pym, takes care of a blind brother.

INSTALLMENT XLV.
AN UNGALLANT BUSINESS.
Lance appeared in the other room carrying the tray with its white cloth. His face had an inward radiance, a tranquility.

"Grandfather, it is good to be here."

And for a while there was silence between them, but Lance was thinking that—perhaps—Mary Merris had found it good to shed tears in this little, funny old room, wherein an old man had looked on life, had brought into being a beautiful faith in the essential goodness of God. Yes, and without dogmatism and without a contorted gruffness, but just as though he had grown to it by feeling and seeing and thinking.

Lance looked out of the window. "I wonder if I ought to tell you, grandfather?"

"Something about yourself, my dear?"

"No—that's told and finished. I think you understand that, didn't you? Yes, I have been a cad, but I am not going to be more of a cad by being weak. No, it's about the Merris girl."

"Mary. Why not Mary?"

"Mary. I found her—crying in here. I couldn't help it. I got out as quickly as I could."

"Ah," said the Venerable, "I'm glad."

His grandson's eyes were wide and a little questioning. "You see, my dear, a woman like Mary must have a room to weep in once or twice in a lifetime. And it happened in here. I'm glad."

Said Lance, reaching for the Venerable's cup to refill it:

"Something's wrong with her life?"

"Just pearls and swine, my dear."

Lance went back to work on the Monday with the creative impatience big in him, and some 15 chapters demanding to be written in the course of the next 35 days.

His promise to John Richmond had no margin left to it, but Lance was not asking for a margin. After scrabbles and flounders he had climbed back to the craftsman's little isolated hill, and the whole urge in him was to write furiously, and to forget everything but those vivid inward pictures that had to be made to flow into the molten metal.

He had walked past Mrs. Carver and her apologetic announcements. "Her ladyship called Saturday, sir. And a young lady left a letter."

"Let me have dinner sharp at 7, please."

He had opened Olive's note, and replying to it inwardly as he had read it, had torn it up. No, no distractions. He had unpacked; he had got out his papers. The power of concentration had returned to him. When he had passed across to that other creative world people could bang doors and taxis could hoot, but these noises would not be heard by him. He was able to put external things beyond or below the threshold of consciousness.

About 9 o'clock Mrs. Carver crept up the stairs and stood on the landing outside his door. He had warned her that he was not to be disturbed, but the young woman who had rung the bell of No. 17, and who was waiting in Mrs. Carver's hall, had assured her that Mr. Pym expected to be disturbed. Mrs. Carver approached his door, listened, and then rapped gently with her knuckles.

"That's some one asking for you, sir."

"Who?"

"A young lady, the one who left the note. I'm so sorry to disturb you, sir—but I thought—"

"Will you please tell her I'm working?"

"Yes, sir."

"Thank you."

Lance's absorption in his work was characteristic and inevitable, but a young man of Olive Gadsden's temperament could not be expected to understand its inevitableness.

She did not see Lance for three days, and she made no attempt to see him, but her obstinacy hardened.

"O, very well, my dear, we'll wait."

Meanwhile she remained upon the fringe of Lance's consciousness, not focused, but there, and between periods of fierce and exultant writing his attention was turned to her. She cast a shadow. He could not but feel a little astonished at the way in which the sensuous glamour of her face decreased, the desire of yesterday had become the faded exaltation of today. Even her mouth had lost its appeal; he was ready to be irritated by her little physical artifices.

But the problem of her remained. He would say to himself, "This sort of thing can't go on. Having regained his inward vision, he acknowledged the futility of the affair, while realizing that however modern and tolerant and natural you may be the instinct of responsibility still functions. He could say to Olive, 'We have had our play, my dear. And now—to work. Good luck to you.'"

He could smile and raise his hat and do the thing in a gentlemanly way, and yet there was something in him that would not be satisfied.

For he was not the sort of cur that slinks off round a corner. Also, there is a quality in creative work that, when it is being well done, makes a man better than himself. The renewal of Lance's mysticism was associated with the Venerable, and the Venerable's little room, and with that other incident of Mary Merris and her tears. Always, a little memory picture was rising before him of a woman surprised in the midst of her weeping. He could not call it sentimentalism; he did not call it anything. He just was conscious of it as he might have been conscious of an effect of sunlight and of shadow, or of a perfume; it seemed to permeate life; it permeated his work. It seemed to associate itself with a new note of tenderness that had been lacking.

Also, it had a positive and a practical effect. It made him see in Olive something of that other woman, something that a man should see in every woman. It moved him to a sensitive gentleness. It was as though that glimpse of a woman's tears had softened his young ruthlessness.

So, one afternoon, with a pipe smoked after tea, and two pages of manuscript left serenely behind him, he went out and along the Crescent to No. 7 and calmly rang the bell. Mrs. Gadsden opened the door. He looked into her large, red accommodating face.

"Is Miss Gadsden in?"

"Mrs. Gadsden smiled over him and at him."

"She won't be in till after 6, sir."

"Can I leave a message?"

"You can, sir."

"Will you please tell Miss Gadsden that I'll call for her at half past six?"

"I will, sir."

Mrs. Gadsden smirked and closed the door on him, and was ready with her message. "He's been round, dearie. He's coming round to call for you at half past six. You won't be feeling cussed, will you?"

Olive loitered on the dark stairs. "That's his affair."

Her upward glance at him was both challenging and whimsical. "Been working awful hard, boy?"

He said that he had. He walked beside her with an air of fierce detachment, approaching the conclusion that no piece of work he more intricate and harassing than the persuading of a woman that his femininities have become superfluous. How did you begin so ungallant a business? Did you blurt out the confession and then hasten to apply the necessary and bland unguents?

He said, "What about a little dinner? Suppose we taxi down to Soho."

"Why not?"

"You're free?"

"Quite."
